Review of the current National Center for Patient Safety (compressed gas) Cylinder Hazard Summary revealed: -A compressed gas cylinder can be turned into a missile if the cylinder is fractured. -Escaping gas will propel the cylinder with enough force to penetrate cinder block walls. Observation of the facility on 08/04/26 at 4:45pm revealed: -There were two large empty oxygen tanks located outside the employee exit door that were not secured in a steadying device. -There was a round table with two chairs located in front of the tanks with a cigarette butt filled coffee can in the middle of the table. Observation of the Administrator on 08/04/26 at 5:01pm revealed: -She made a telephone call to the local oxygen supply company to make arrangements again to have the empty tanks removed from the facility. -The representative on the telephone informed her someone would be at the facility by 6:00pm to pick up the oxygen tanks. Telephone interview with a representative at the local oxygen supply company on 08/05/26 at 11:17am revealed: -They had received a call from the facility's Administrator on both 07/31/26 and 08/03/26 requesting two oxygen tanks be picked up. -They planned to pick them up on 08/03/26 but they were short-staffed and did not get around to it that day.
